These thirty-two slides and taped commentary analyze three multiple fatality penal institution fires that took place during the summer of 1977. The three fires--one in Saint John, New Brunswick; another in Columbia, Tennessee; and the third in Danbury, Connecticut--resulted in the deaths of sixty-eight people. Examination of combustible materials along with unreliable unlocking and evacuation arrangements, lack of early warning detection and automatic/manual fire suppression measures--created the potential for inevitable tragedies.

SC 120 SURVIVAL SHOOTING TECHNIQUES
1978/Motorola/40 slides/audio-cassette/script

Audience: CT-LET

These slides produced to supplement the 16mm film, cover the following topics: firepower vs. weapon control; patterns of encounter; need for preparation and proper approach; definitions of key terms; shooting behind cover, and instinct shooting. Use of the slides is helpful in discussing concepts covered in the film, but bear additional class time. Side one of the audio-cassette contains interviews with four men who have one thing in common--they each have killed a police officer. Listening to their candid remarks gives the message "the bad guys are prepared, and they know it better than anyone." Side two of the cassette counterpoints side one by interviewing four officers who were shot and survived, and their regrets at not being better prepared. The major content points covered are as follows: circumstances of the shooting; image of the police officer in films and on television; personal feeling about being involved in the shooting; mistakes made in the shooting encounter; perceptions about being prepared for the next shooting; differences between shooting at paper targets vs. live armed suspects; opportunities for survival training today, as well as final comments.
